Couldn't Lift Ten Pounds.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.

J. B. CORTON. I could not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago.

I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so.

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Corton will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address: Foster-McMullen Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

What Is the Greatest Fear

The Farmer Has to Contend with? By E. A. J.

What is the farmer's greatest fear? That of what we desire to know; that of the risk he takes in the future. It is the chief we have to endure. I don't mean poverty of brains. Though we may not rightly seek gains, I don't mean poverty of spirit. And use the most successful plan; I mean we can't certainly know. Which is the chief we have to endure. To secure small amount of gain, I wish something to soil to remain. It isn't poverty of finances. Wherever we may further enhance our prospects to more obtain greater crops and betterments gain; Though this is one of the many fears which everyone fearfully knows. Often prevents our securing advantages more enduring. We often see a farmer's trade where we our condition might aid; But failed the income to arrest, Because we'd no crop to invest. But 'tis the poverty of soil. That causes us to toil and toil, Dispute and quarrel with the soil. That is our most relentless foe. Always encroaching on our fields. And cutting short our sunny fields. Every spring we begin to toil To check this poverty of soil; We haul out dressing on the ground, And upon our fields spread it around. Then plow, harrow, and till This poverty of soil to kill. Then run in debt or buy with cash. Some other snail made up like hash. To make the crops some better grow; For while we are full of manure, Cut and made or properly cured, Into the barn are packed away To be laid out some other day; Then work it over to again renew; In the winter to stock in feed. As small profit of gain per head, To keep down poverty of soil. We crop that place for years a few, Then work it over to again renew; In the winter to stock in feed. As small profit of gain per head, To keep down poverty of soil. From spring to fall, and fall to spring. Going round in a perfect ring. To keep down this relentless foe, That forces us to labor so. I don't mean poverty of spirit. To encourage, retard or foil This foe, according to my mind. I don't mean poverty of spirit. And while we crop that seeded piece, It will continue to decrease. To keep down this relentless foe, That forces us to labor so. I don't mean poverty of spirit. To encourage, retard or foil This foe, according to my mind. I don't mean poverty of spirit. And while we crop that seeded piece, It will continue to decrease. To keep down this relentless foe, That forces us to labor so. I don't mean poverty of spirit. To encourage, retard or foil This foe, according to my mind. I don't mean poverty of spirit. And while we crop that seeded piece, It will continue to decrease.

It must do its work well. Otherwise there is no pay. That pay, to be sure, is not large—only 5 cents an alley, with a tax of a cent per laborer in order that there may be a fund to replace worn-out brooms—but the results are excellent.

They must observe the street cleaning ordinances as well as or better than the real employees of the city. They must keep the alleys free from dirt, must gather up all refuse in a wheelbarrow, sprinkle the street before they sweep it and comply with all the regulations. Any infringement meets with a stern reprimand, and work poorly done must be done over.

Constant supervision has fostered a sense of responsibility in these small citizens, who are being trained in the ways of civic pride, and they vie with one another in leaving their alleys spotless.

"Miss Hancock, can I do another alley?" is the constant query of the tireless sweepers.

"Let me do the Greek's alley, Miss Hancock," Sam Johnson's too little to do it all alone. "He wanted to make 15 cents, for he had in mind a kite in the corner store, and he knew the Greek's alley was a profitable undertaking."

"The combined beauties of this work," said Miss Hancock as she instructed a recruit in the art of sweeping out corners, "is that it develops in the children a sense of civic pride and the quality of thoroughness. If they are ever property owners or have homes to care for they will not shrink their responsibilities to themselves and the community at large by neglecting to keep them outwardly as well as inwardly clean."

Less eerie than their predecessors, the uncanny little sweeps of London, who were dear to the heart of Charles Lamb, but as picturesque and useful, these amateur white wings are the product of our inadequate municipal management, but they have solved in their small way the dirty street problem, though the bureau of street cleaning does not know of its valuable auxiliary.

BOYS AS WHITE WINGS.

Miss Cornelia Hancock's "Broom Brigade" of Little Negroes.

Charles Lamb laments in touching language the disappearance of the chimney sweep, and if he were alive today to see Miss Cornelia Hancock's "broom brigade" the essayist would doubtless indite immortal words of praise.

This brigade is unlike any other body of cleaners in Philadelphia. It is a move that any town can follow with profit.

The brigade is made up of twenty-five little negro boys from the colored settlement, 922 Locust street, and Miss Hancock is the brigadier general, says the Philadelphia North American.

Armed with all the implements that the regular "white wings" use, the brigade sallies forth every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon to scour up the alleys and courts between Walnut, Spruce, Ninth and Broad streets.

It must do its work well. Otherwise there is no pay. That pay, to be sure, is not large—only 5 cents an alley, with a tax of a cent per laborer in order that there may be a fund to replace worn-out brooms—but the results are excellent.

State Should Offer Bounty for Moth Pests.

Bro. Shorey of the Bridgton News recently asked: "What shall we do to be saved from the brown-tail?"

The remedy is simple. The nests of the gypsy moth must be destroyed.

The habit of winter hiving of the brown-tails makes their nests easy to find, whereas the gypsy moth eggs are more difficult but they can be hunted down and the ravages of both these destructive pests can be controlled if not exterminated.

How shall it be done? Just this way: Have the State offer bounty for each nest of brown-tails and each entire cluster of gypsy moth eggs. This bounty paid by the town and city treasurer, when presented in lots of ten or more, under similar conditions as the crow bounty was paid some years ago. The size of this bounty to be determined by the selectmen of the different towns and to be large enough to insure the gathering in of the crop.

A reasonable bounty for this section of the State might be ten cents per nest, whereas in some sections of York county a penny per nest might be sufficient, hence the necessity of a graded scale of bounty to fit the different sections of the State.

This is very simple but it will cost money. Yes, certainly it will, but it can be made the means of destroying the pests and holding them in check.

Whatever is done must be done quickly. This year's crop must be gathered and we believe it's the duty of the State to do the gathering and bear the expense of so doing. The non-infested portion of the State should bear some of the burden, as well as the infested districts.

Under the bill now before the Legislature, the infested districts must expend one-twentieth of one per cent. of the assessed valuation before the State does anything. In other words, Norway must expend $500 per year in fighting the pests before the State pays anything, while what is being done in Norway is protecting Waterford but that town bears none of the expense. If Norway expends the required sum, 75 per cent. is returned from the State to the town of the excess spent above $500.

Will Norway, Paris and Bethel expend this sum of money? No, not until the ravages of the pests are beyond control and have infested all the adjoining towns. The bill as drawn is well calculated to allow the brown-tail and gypsy moths to spread over the entire State.

It will not be enforced until it is too late, as the people will be slow to see the necessity for it and the whole State will become infested and the control of the pest will cost us millions of dollars, as in the State of Massachusetts.

WEST PARIS.

Dexter—Dismore.

A quiet home wedding occurred at the Maple House, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dexter, when their daughter Cora Marion was married to Reginald Stanford Dismore on Saturday at 3 p. m.

Their private parlor was decorated in green and white. The bride and groom stood beneath a large white bell. J. Edgar Dexter and wife stood up with them while Rev. Isabella S. MacDuff in an impressive manner performed the single ring service.

Only the immediate families were present. The bride was dressed in a dainty white muslin which was her graduation dress. Her travelling suit was of stylish brown small check plaid that was very becoming. Mr. and Mrs. Dismore left on the afternoon train amid showers of rice for Lewiston accompanied by the bride's brother and wife, and the groom's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Dismore of Norway.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Dexter were returning to their home in Lewiston after a two weeks' vacation. The rest of the party will visit them for a few days and then return to their home in Norway.

The newly married couple will remain there at present, but in the spring they intend to go to Greenville for their permanent home.

Mr. Dismore is a young man of good reputation. He also was a graduate of Norway High school in the same class with Mrs. Dismore. Last summer he attended an automobile summer school and intends to make gasoline engine work his business. He has also done some snowshoe filling, for the celebrated Dunham snowshoes.
